What difference does it make if my child has time off school?

When pupils return to school after absence, they find it difficult to move on in learning with the rest of the class because they have missed the teaching that leads up to that point. Sometimes it is also hard to pick up with friends again.

A few days off can soon add up.

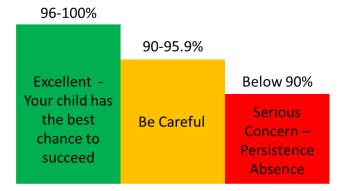

Research shows that children who have more than 10 days off, achieve lower grades. Missing 17 days of school can mean your child achieves a whole level less than they are capable of in the Y6 SATs. And this then reduces GCSE results and employment chances.

90% is a good mark for a test but 90% attendance is low - the threshold for persistence absence. It actually means a child has had the equivalent of half a day off every week! This adds up to 4 weeks over the year - 100 lessons missed.

How many lessons did it take you to learn to drive, play an instrument or improve a sport skill? Think what you could achieve in 100 lessons!

Missing School Means Missing Out

How can you help?

Let us know if your child is going to be absent and ask to meet with your child's form tutor if your child isn't wanting to come to school. The sooner we know about difficulties, the quicker we can work with you to solve them.

Holidays in term-time: These can no longer be authorised. Taking a holiday in term time could lead to a fine imposed by the educational welfare service.

Medical/Dental appointments: Try to make these before or after school; missing a morning or afternoon registration counts as absence.

We appreciate that children will have an illness at some time or another but we need to make sure they come to school when they are well and only have time off when absolutely necessary.
